

High-speed rail age

One of Europe's most exciting rail developments is taking shape in London.

This aerial picture shows the new flat roofed terminal for the Channel Tunnel fast link being built in front of the traditional curved roof of St Pancras station.

To the left are the curved rooves of King's Cross station. High-speed trains will begin arriving at the St Pancras International in three year's time.

Picture: Rail Link Engineering